Dear Welton Family,

As we enter June it feels like so many more months have passed since we were together as a face to face community. For many of us its months since we last hugged a vulnerable parent or one of the special people in our lives. The numerous sources of data, medical and other professional opinions is all quite overwhelming and in turn makes everyone feel anxious.

However, there is hope, we are told we are past the peak and gradually things are changing for the better. As a school team we are talking about welcoming more children back into school and making practical arrangements so this can happen safely if not quite as quickly as some of you may have hoped.

To spur us on towards the time we will be together again here is a poem written for some very vulnerable children at a time when they felt like giving up.

Hope on a rope

If you don't want to lose hope,
tie it to a rope and pull yourself to safety. Because hope has the power to lift you up whether your problems are light or
